SOMETHING NEW !!

As many of you will know, we are trialing YouTube as a means of training. We have posted our first video covering the importing and allocation of Nait tags. The video is easy to view, simply go to YouTube and enter Livestockoffice to bring up our profile page, click on video and view. The resolution is best set to 720p HD, which you can set by clicking on the little cog symbol at the bottom of the video screen. As this is new to us, we welcome your feedback. Also, we need your suggestions on what you would like illustrated in future videos. Please let us know, call us or email - 03 445 1345

Updates

We have been quite busy in the office with updates and advancements. All our upgrades are on our website for you to download to ensure you are running the latest version. Also on our downloads page, you will find Help files that will assist with specific modules of the program, like mass coms, esale etc. Check them out if you haven't already. As always, we are only a phone call away for assistance and help.

We thought it was time to introduce ourselves to you who haven't already met us. It's always nice to see a face. This month, I drew the short straw.

Introducing Leonie

Shearing News

Noisy Woolsheds

Everyone seems to have an opinion about noise levels in woolsheds – It's too loud. Everyone involved in shearing has a part to play: the farmer who provides the workplace, the shearing machines and wool presses; the designers of the shearing equipment; the shearing contractors and the people working in the shed. There's a genuine concern for everyone's safety and welfare. Over time, people will lose hearing, to some degree, because of the noise. Protect yourselves NOW! Wear ear plugs, because the noise can't be fixed over night. It will take time.

Shearing Sports

It has been a busy couple of months with the Shearing Competitions that are now well into the circuit. There have been some great results and really exciting shows making the points race very interesting. With lots more to come, the upcoming shows will be well worth attending. There continues to be surprise wins and placings making for exciting competitions within the circuit as well as for spectators.

Congrats to Dion King and Cam Ferguson who join the ranks of Master Shearer status.
